Gaining on the men

Matt Kammeyer, Salt Lake City Corp.'s director of golf, reports that women close just about as many business deals on the golf course as men do. He says that it might be tough for the ladies to break in, so he gives some direction on getting started.

FORE LAKES GOLF COURSE, TAYLORSVILLE

T.A. Barker Jr.
Superintendent
Fore Lakes
Golf Course

Third-generation superintendent wouldn't want to be anywhere else but running the family golf course

EDITOR'S NOTE: When it comes to understanding golf as a business, there is no one more qualified than the folks at Golfdom magazine. After all, they've been covering the sport for over 90 years. Founded by World Golf Hall of Fame member Herb Graffis and his brother Joe, Golfdom was one of the early places where the sport was treated as a business. Graffis entered the hall as a writer, but is also the founder of the National Golf Foundation and the Club Managers Association of America.

So, when someone is honored with the Herb Graffis Businessperson of the Year Award for their efforts in golf, it really means something.

The award for 2018 was given to Todd "T.A." Barker Jr., superintendent at the Fore Lakes Golf Course in Taylorsville. The following is the cover story about Barker and his receiving the award, written by Seth Jones, Golfdom editor-in chief.

When we last heard from the protagonist of this story, he was nervously laughing about the time he charged $10,000 on his personal credit card to cover his chapter's annual meeting expenses. That was April 2014, in a story about the work of the Golf Course Superintendents Association of America field staff and how they were helping smaller chapters grow. The $10,000 has been reimbursed and the then-president of the Intermountain GCSA has seen it paid back, plus interest.

T.A. Barker Jr., superintendent at Fore Lakes Golf course in Taylorsville, is an advocate for getting more people on the golf course — kids, minorities, veterans and people with disabilities. He also was an advocate for superintendents as a golf radio talk show host on ESPN 700 in Utah. More recently, he was elected to the GCSAA board of directors.

Now Barker adds the title of 2018 Herb Graffis Businessperson of the Year to his resume for his work in the family business in the Salt Lake City golf market.

Barker is a third-generation superintendent, working his entire career at his family-owned golf course. The course is centrally located south of Salt Lake City between Interstate 15 and Interstate 215 and features a nine-hole executive course and a nine-hole par-3 course along with a driving range and practice green.

The course, built by his grandfather on family farmland, opened in 1974. When Barker was a baby, his family moved to a home between No. 2 green and No. 3 tee on the par-3 course. Barker's earliest golf memories are of chasing his father out the door in hopes of catching a ride in the golf cart to go fix divots and pick up cigarette butts while his dad changed cups.

Business golf: It's not just men on the course

It's not head-turning to hear about how golf is a great business networking tool and that successful business leaders know how to leverage the game of golf as a means to conduct business. An industry study indicated that nearly 60 percent of business golfers have closed a deal on the golf course. This was according to a 2016 comprehensive study by the Sports and Leisure Research Group (SLRG) that included an online quantitative survey comprised of 1,100 business executives divided equally among men and women and players and non-players.

However, what is head-turning is that women golfers reported closing a deal on the golf course at nearly the same rate as men (men: 60 percent, women: 58 percent). The National Golf Foundation reports that in 2018, women golfers represented 24 percent of all players. As reported in the SLRG study, the median number of deals closed was equal between both groups. These deals weren't small, either. More than a quarter of the women who closed a deal through golf reported the value of the deal to be at or above $500,000.

The study found that nearly 80 percent of women believe that playing golf in a business environment is a great networking tool for relationships with peers, clients and potential clients, and suppliers or vendors. Over half of business women who golf say that golf has helped make them more disciplined, comfortable taking risks and assertive. Nearly 60 percent of women golfers felt that playing golf has contributed to their professional success and made them feel more included.

Not Always Easy

Positives aside, there were some responses of note that suggest that entry into the game of business golf is not as easy for women as it might be for men. The study found that golfing women executives feel that the game is not as accessible to women as men in their companies and that golfing women executives are 25 percent more likely than their male counterparts to feel that business golf is more stressful than social golf.

Golf can be intimidating on many levels for both women and men. The terms and scoring of the game are odd to newcomers, the equipment can be technical and proper course etiquette can feel tricky to navigate. Properly introducing newcomers to the game of golf and teaching both the culture and the mechanics of the game from the start is very worthwhile and can make all the difference in taking the stress out of potentially stressful golf course situations.

Learning How

Working with a certified golf professional at a local course can help smooth the learning process or help fill in any gaps in skills and understanding. Many local courses offer effective group and individual instruction tailored to beginners' needs, with some courses even offering women-only clinics. Some courses also offer weekly women's leagues and couple's leagues that serve as great environments for networking, developing playing skills, fostering confidence and growing an appreciation for the game. Leagues provide fun variations on scoring and play and provide a handicapping system that levels the playing field for golfers of all abilities.

Beyond learning the skills necessary to understand, play and appreciate the game of golf, much can still be done by golf course operators to help women golfers feel more comfortable and welcome on the golf course. Men and women have some differing approaches, motivations and preferences when it comes to connecting with the game of golf. It's important for golf course operators to listen closely to both customer groups and be willing to implement thoughtful feedback in facilitating enhancements that better accommodate everyone. Additionally, large and small business operators need to make sure they are providing opportunities for women in their companies to go out and play. Not only will it help grow their business, but it will assist in developing confident leaders.

It's just good business.

only kid you'd ever meet who never wanted to be an astronaut," Barker said. "My dream was to be a golf course superintendent."

"He just wanted to spend time with his dad," Todd Barker Sr. said of those days. "It was pretty obvious he also loved the work. As he got older the jobs got better ... now he's much more knowledgeable in terms of agronomy than I ever was."

That's high praise from his dad. Men striving to live up to their father's image, pity T.A. — Todd Barker Jr. — because in his father he has a doozy of a namesake to live up to. Along with being a dedicated family man and influential local business owner, Todd Sr. is a member of the Utah Golf Hall of Fame, a five-time Utah Golf Association Player of the Year, a five-time Salt Lake Amateur champion and a two-time GCSAA National Golf Champion. (Fun fact: T.A.'s grandpa, Vaughn, also won the GCSAA tournament back in 1977.)

T.A. said he's no hack (he won the Division Four championship at the 2015 Golf Industry Show in San Antonio), but a long time ago he realized his future was in keeping greens, not reading them.

"I gave up a golfing career a long time ago and I've always found the science behind golf more interesting than actually playing," Barker said. "Dad is my biggest critic, which makes me better. He knows what good golf is. As long as he's happy, I know the course looks good."

A livelihood and the future

The Salt Lake City area is rich with majestic mountains and great golf courses. Golf tourists traveling through the area might not have heard of Fore Lakes. That's OK — the course isn't designed for them.

"It's a great facility to take your first step in golf. It's affordable, there are a lot of leagues," said Bill Walker, the former executive director of the Utah Golf Association, now executive director of the International Association of Golf Administrators. "The greens are great, and there's a large practice putting green and chipping green. If you're talking about getting kids into the game, it's ideal. It's right off I-15. It's just a great set-up."

An adult walker pays $12 to play the nine-hole executive course, $10 to play the par-3. A senior pays $10 for the executive, $7 for the par-3. The price of a beer ranges from $2.25 to $2.50, the quarter variance depending on the brew's country of origin.

Barker believes Fore Lakes' practice putting green is the most-used golf green in the state of Utah. Seeing people on it constantly makes his day.

This Utah course is surprisingly diverse. Beyond the beer league, the women's league and the couples league, there's the veterans, the Pacific Islanders and the Special Olympians, among others. A busy day is 300-plus 9-hole rounds with 100-plus visiting the driving range throughout the day.

The father of three (he and wife, Natalie, have three children, Peyton, 10; Boston, 7; and Greyson, 3) loves it when kids play the course. He's embraced the Youth on Course program to encourage more young golfers to visit Fore Lakes. A kid buying a $10 membership to the program can play the par-3 course for $1 anytime or the executive course for $4. The difference is subsidized by the Utah Golf Foundation.

"One time," Barker said, "I drove up to a group and I said, 'Do you guys know about the Youth on Course program? Every time you come here, it would only cost you $1 if you show your card.' One of the kids in the group, his brain clicks and he says, 'That means I could have played five times today!' Getting those kids to play is my livelihood, it's what feeds my kids and it's the future of the game."

"T.A. has never said no to anyone," Walker said. "More players, more diversity. A lot of the veterans go back and play there because it's such a welcoming place to go. T.A. seeks out ways to get customers there."

'The radio guy'

There's a problem when a person becomes known for saying 'yes' — that means more and more people will ask for favors.

And that's how T.A. Barker became a radio personality.

He originally was to be the guest on a Utah golf radio show broadcast Saturday mornings with Paul Pugmire, executive director of the First Tee of Utah, as host. But shortly after his first appearance, Pugmire asked him to become a regular.

"There's a reason I asked him to join the show," Pugmire said. "He has two areas of expertise: 1. He's a certified superintendent from Penn State, and 2. He knows as much as anyone about growing up on a golf course, running a golf course, owning a golf course. A long time ago I worked on a grounds crew, so I have a soft spot for maintenance. But we were able to have impromptu conversations on the radio show that we never would have otherwise had without T.A. And he taught me things about golf courses that I never knew!"

"Before (at Fore Lakes), I was known as the superintendent, but now when I'm out on the range I'm known as the radio guy," Barker laughed. "I don't know how I ended up on the radio. Paul and I are polar opposites but we mesh together well. I'm a big proponent of slowing down green speeds, so we talk about that kind of stuff."

Barker recently retired from the radio show because of his new responsibilities as an elected member of the GCSAA board of directors, a position that thrills Barker.

"Serving the 18,000 members of GCSAA is an honor. Since being elected to the board at the Golf Industry Show, I have found the staff and the board of GCSAA live our mission every day," Barker said. "It's been a lot of work that fills my heart with joy knowing that I contribute to our mission every day. We truly are the global leaders in golf course management."

Pugmire said it wasn't the radio show or the GCSAA election that made Barker's name known throughout Utah.

"T.A. and his family matter way beyond Fore Lakes. You have to remind yourself that T.A., his dad and his grandpa are running a golf course, because they're all over Utah ... the Barker family is a family that matters in Utah golf," Pugmire said. "T.A. is involved and serves both the golf community and the Salt Lake City community. He's a guy who gives back. Fore Lakes participates in all the programs — Get Golf Ready, Play 9, you name it."

More of the spotlight

The spotlight seems to have focused on Barker lately. Around the same time as this story was being written, he was nominated for Utah Section PGA Superintendent of the Year-Public Golf.

Megan Huntsman, program director for the Utah Golf Foundation, is happy to see Barker's success. She manages the Youth on Course and the Veterans Golf programs and owes some of her success to Barker, as he was one of the first adopters of both programs.

"I understand T.A. a little bit because he grew up in golf and I grew up in golf," Huntsman said. "He's not in golf because of the family connection, but because he genuinely loves it. He loves golf because of the people ... and you can't go wrong with people involved in Utah golf. It's a family game here, because it has to be — we have big families here."

Todd Sr. is happy to see his son's success as well. "(T.A.) is a go-getter; he has lofty goals," Barker Sr. said. "I'm happy to put in a little extra time for him to support him. We're blessed. We're not the only family in the golf business here ... and we just keep chugging along."

"I don't process it well," Barker said about the accolades after a Sunday afternoon installing an irrigation system in his yard. He can't help but choke up a little. "I've never realized how people look at our family. I know who my dad is and what he accomplished, but for me he was just Dad. Golf put food on the table. We owe golf nothing, and golf owes us nothing. I just love this industry, not even golf ... but people enjoying golf, kids enjoying golf and knowing I impacted their day."

So, the guy who charges $10,000 on his personal credit card for the local chapter meeting expenses — the same guy who charges local kids $1 to tee it up at his course — is a good businessman?

Indeed, he is. If Herb Graffis were here today, he'd look at Fore Lakes and congratulate T.A. for taking care of business.

10 REASONS

golf will always be the Ultimate Business Tool

Anyone reading the mainstream media and their constant efforts to trumpet the demise of golf could be forgiven for thinking that golf as a business tool is passé. Sure, participation is down, but 25 million players in the USA alone is not exactly a small number.

Then when you look at the number of top CEOs, sports stars, movie stars and entrepreneurs who are avid golfers, those numbers are actually pretty impressive. An estimated 90 percent of Fortune 500 CEOs play golf, as have almost all of the U.S. presidents since

Ike. And executives who play golf make an average of 17 percent more than those who don't.

Business golf is not just surviving, it's thriving! For the sake of your business or career, here are 10 reasons you'd better get in on the action:

Face Time

Where else can you spend four quality hours with your company CEO or valued customers? With today's busy schedules most of us are lucky if we can get five minutes! There is simply no other sport with the amount of quiet time between shots that allows for wide-ranging conversations and mutual interests to be discovered.

Friendships Forged

An interest in golf alone can be enough to move your friendships several notches up the corporate ladder. Best of all, the friendships built around golf tend to last a lifetime, so as people move around new opportunities will open up for you.

Game for Life

It's a sport that suits all ages, backgrounds and abilities. Thanks to the handicap system, people of widely different abilities can play together and still compete. So the 60-something CEO can still beat his 30-something prospect or employee, while the 30-something executive can look forward to decades of on-course meetings and deals. Try doing that on the squash court!

Networking

One of the great things about golf is you can just show up at a club and get a game. Depending on your business, you could be looking at three prospects each and every time you tee it up! Golf is the ultimate networking environment for all kinds of professionals and services.

Serene Surroundings

You can plan a client meeting in an office surrounded by water, nature and sand instead of four white walls. This instantly creates a more relaxed and friendly environment in which to do business without the normal distractions.

Open Doors on the Road

When you travel, golf is a great way to open doors by letting prospects or business contacts know you are in the area and up for a game. I have built many amazing relationships around the world by looking on LinkedIn for someone in the area I am planning to visit and suggesting a game.

Advantage Women

If you are a businesswoman, playing golf is an even greater advantage. Adrienne Wax, co-author of Even Par: How Golf helps Women Gain the Upper Hand In Business, says, "Outside the office, you can communicate differently with your higher-level peers and get to know one another in a way that the office can't provide. Being able to talk golf in the office gives you a chance to bond with the bigwigs. If you can talk about golf, suddenly you have reasons to talk with the CEO."

10

The 19th Hole

After your round, the 19th hole provides the perfect setting to take your newly enhanced relationship to the next level or, indeed, to go ahead and ask for the order!

So, don't wait any longer, get out of the office and head to the course, to boost your business today!

Andrew Wood is CEO of Legendary Marketing, a Tampa/Orlando-based advertising agency. He is a leading expert on golf, resort, destination and real estate marketing and the author of over 20 books, including The Golf Marketing Bible.

Business Intelligence

You can learn more about a person in four hours golfing than in a lifetime of meetings. Not just by what they say but by how they handle themselves on the course. Do they play by the rules and control their emotions? Or do they fudge and blow a fuse?

Perfect Gifting

When someone is a golfer, it's easy to give a small gift that makes an impact. A golf book or logoed hat or towel from St. Andrews can quickly and inexpensively enhance a relationship.
